This August Meeting:

We're excited to welcome guest speakers from the Talking Books and Braille Center at the San Francisco Public Library's Main Branch (100 Larkin Street, Civic Center). This center is part of the National Library Service for the Blind and Print Disabled (NLS), a Library of Congress program that provides free, accessible library resources to San Francisco residents with visual or print-reading disabilities.

Our speakers will cover the programs, services, and equipment the center offers, and will bring applications for the National Library Service, available in multiple languages. We strongly encourage attending in person: speakers will be on hand to help you fill out and submit your application right at the meeting. If approved, you'll gain access to a wide range of accessibility resources at no cost.

If you have a specific language you'd like an application for, or questions you'd like the speakers to address, let us know in advance so we can pass them along!
